

HIGHLY RECOMMENDED

GARTONE Regal 1863c

A high five is owed to the person who decided to retire his vintage Voxes and Marshalls and commission Gartone to come up with an amp which could perform the job of both. This 36W head - which is switchable, and extremely convincingly too, down to 18W or 9W - uses four EL84s. It's got pentode/triode modes, solid state/valve rectifier, and two channels - but they're not switchable without an A/B box; this is old-school, man. Heck, even the master volume is defeatable.

Insert guitar, go. Channel 1 is pure, sparkly, nostalgic Voxiness; Channel 2 is crunchy, Plexi-toned goodness through and through, and the Vibe knob - actually a negative feedback control - adds top end and gain for even more fun. With lots and lots of volume on tap, great tones all over the dials and fabulous build quality on the inside, this handwired UK amp is a force to be reckoned with. If nailing vintage Vox and Marshall-type tones sounds like your thing - or even creating your own great-British-amp-which-was-never-made - then you'd be rather more than remiss in not considering the Gartone.
